The contest

The contestants who took part in this edition of the contest were asked to organize a Diversity Day. To support the students in carrying out their projects, we have introduced a new workshop titled 'Project management'. The next challenge was to present the project and the final effects in front of a jury. The fact that the teams had to present their projects standing on the scene of the Nowe Horyzonty Cinema was an additional difficulty.

Award

The winning teams were invited to take part in educational expeditions. This time they took place in the rugged autumnal scenery of the Karkonosze mountains. Marek Guzowski was the guardian and the trainer of our participants. To allow the students to take an active part in the work of the small groups, we have divided the expeditions into two editions, where only a small number of students took part in each of them.

The aim of the expedition was to develop leadership skills, project management skills, and teamwork skills. Every day they were asked to complete a set of team tasks and take part in field games. They had a unique opportunity to develop their competences through actively working with stereotypes during games, discussions, and experiences. The teachers, who were the guardians of the winning teams, were invited to take an active part in the workshops.
